16	Death on the Pale Horse— Revelations , Chapter vi. . .	Benjamin West, P.R.A.

Description of the Picture.—Death on the Pale Horse (Rev. ch. vi. ver. 8) is represented destroying Man and all living things, in every direction. The Powers of Hell follow on the clouds behind him. An image of the devouring mortality is seen in the sudden death of a young mother and her infant son. She is supported by her husband, who at the same time extends his arms, as it were, to stop the galloping of the Pale Horse. Her daughter, a beautiful child, in a pathetic attitude, endeavors to succor her. The destruction by wild beasts is represented by a lion and lioness rushing upon a tumultuous group of men on horseback and on foot, who are endeavoring, in turn, to destroy their assailants. A wild bull is seen attacking the crowd behind, and tossing a youth in the air. The furious animal is himself assailed by the dogs. In the clouds an eagle and heron are engaged in mortal combat, and on the foreground a dove is lamenting over its dead mate. Near the bull, but somewhat further in the picture, a young man is struck dead by lightning, on the supposed day of his intended marriage; his brother is supporting his lifeless body, and a young female, his intended bride, gazing wildly on him. A number of figures are seen in confusion, terror, and astonishment at this awful visitation. Over their heads the firmament is rent; the clouds are broken; the thunders and lightnings let loose, and the heavens rolled together "as a scroll." (Rev. vi. 14.) The destruction by Famine is represented by a sallow, emaciated man, with a wrinkled visage and hollow eyes, on his knees, endeavoring to dig up some wild roots with his long nails, to appease the ravenous cravings of nature. His empty cup lies beside him. Close to this, the destruction by Pestilence is figured by a woman with an expression of pain and malady in her wan countenance and crouching attitude. The destruction by War is represented by a figure in helmet and armor, mounted on a red horse, with his sword raised in the act of charging, and the clouds of battle rising before him. Near this scourge of the human race, a man mounted on a black horse with the balances is seen. (Rev. ch. vi. ver. 5.) Christ, crowned, with a bow in one hand and a quiver at his shoulder, mounted on a white horse, is going forth "conquering and to conquer." (Rev. ch. vi. ver. 2.) On the foreground beneath, the serpent lies with his head bruised, in fulfilment of the sacred word. The eyes of the Redeemer are fixed upon the souls of the martyrs, who are ascending in glory to heaven. (Rev. ch. vi. ver. 9.) This mysterious representation, which forms so beautiful a part of the picture, is introduced here as another emblem of the final accomplishment of the Christian dispensation at the last day. In the background, on this side of the picture, a Roman army appears on its march, loaded with the golden spoils of the Temple of Jerusalem, and driving along the Hebrew captives. On the still more remote sea-coast, a Christian fleet is seen, and the landing of the Crusaders to recapture the Holy City.

17	Datheen Preaching before the Walls of Ghent,	J. B. Wittkamp.
This picture represents the combatants engaged in the struggle for the independence of the Netherlands when that country was under the dominion of Spain, in the 16th century. PIERRE DATHEEN was a Protestant minister, who had labored zealously to establish the Republic. Brave, impetuous and indefatigable, he preached in the churches, in private houses, in the open air, and on the field of battle. In the above scene, DATHEEN is represented as being mounted on the carriage of a cannon, and inciting his companions to avenge one of their brethren-in-arms—the leader of one of the powerful corporations which had struggled so courageously against the tyranny of Philip II. The warriors swearing to avenge their chief, at the moment the struggle, to the left, is commencing.

117	The Deliverance of Leyden,	J. B. Wittkamp.

In 1574, during the cruel wars carried on by Philip II., Leyden was besieged by the Spaniards under Valdez, proper precautions were by some fatality neglected, and the inhabitants were exposed to the pressure of a thousand wants during the most obstinate and bloody siege the Netherlands had yet experienced. The Spaniards, by a strict blockade, reduced it to the last extremity. Six thousand persons out of twenty thousand died of famine.

The magnanimous resolution was formed of breaking down the dikes, and letting the ocean overflow the Rhineland. Information was given to the besieged by their countrymen at a distance, by means of carrier-pigeons, that the dikes of the Meuse and the Yssel had been opened. The sea, impelled by a violent southwest wind, rushed in and drove the inundation with such fury against the besiegers, that Valdez, fearing that his army would be swallowed up in the waves, was obliged to draw off his forces, and relinquish the enterprise. The Admiral of Zealand, Louis Boissot, then advanced with his little fleet of flat-bottomed boats, which had been prepared for the relief of the brave citizens, sailed over the newly-formed expanse, and triumphantly entered the city.

The Prince of Orange soon arrived among the gallant inhabitants. After rewarding the Admiral and the commander of the town, Douza (or Does), and the officers and soldiers, he offered to the town the option of two benefits—an immunity from taxes for a certain period, or the foundation of a university in the city. The citizens crowned their former glory by choosing the latter part of the alternative. It is to this circumstance that the celebrated University of Leyden owes its existence.

No. 1. Is the Burgomaster of the town, Pieter Adrianszoon Vanderwerf. He is raising his eyes towards heaven, as thanking the God of his country.

No. 2. Pieter Corneleszoon Manalant, an Evangelical Preacher, apostle of the Protestant religion.

No. 3. The Military Chief, Van der Does.

No. 4. Gerard Van der Laan, Captain of Volunteers, who has returned from the outside of the town, where he has protected Boissot's boats.

No. 5. The Poet, Pieter Janszoon Van der Morsch, wounded during the siege.

No. 6. Is a portrait of the Painter, J. B. Wittkamp.

The groups dispersed over the picture represent different classes of society. The deliverance of the town and the arrival of bread are the two sentiments that cause a thrill among the wretched inhabitants, who had been on the brink of the grave.

57	Battle of the Centaurs and the Lapithæ. (From original model.) Presented by the artist,	John Lough.

At the marriage of Pirithous, one of the Lapithæ, with Hippodamia, the chiefs of the Lapithæ were assembled to celebrate the nuptials. The Centaurs were also invited to the festivity. One of them, Eurytius, inflamed by wine, resolved to make the bride his prize, and, in his fury, seized her by the hair to carry her off. His companions followed his example, and each, according to his fancy, fastened upon one of the female attendants of the bride. The Lapithæ instantly resented this brutal outrage, and the fight became general. Many of the Centaurs were slain, and the rest compelled to retreat.

This group, the work of Mr. Lough, a British artist, is truly original, both in conception and execution. Though so many large figures, men and horses, are brought together, the whole is combined with an admirable harmony of design. The attitudes of the male figures exhibit strength and grace, and the females the beauty, delicacy, and alarm of their sex. Near the top of the pyramid the bride is seen, her dishevelled hair in the grasp of her ravisher. Theseus attacks the Centaur to rescue her, and Pirithous, on a magnificent horse, with drawn sword is flying to her assistance. Hercules is also active in the combat.
